

Clinical Psychology Graduate Program

The Master's in Clinical Psychology provides students with an excellent opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of psychological theories, assessments, and treatments related to mental health issues. This program focuses on the diagnosis and treatment of psychological disorders, complex cognitive and emotional processes, and improving individuals' quality of life. Students will become familiar with a range of scientific and clinical methods, including individual and group counseling, psychotherapy, and contemporary therapeutic techniques. This field equips graduates with the skills to work as clinical psychology professionals in clinical settings, hospitals, counseling centers, and other areas related to mental health care.